

BRING THEM IN

In the UK very few dogs are kenneled in yards, guardians consider it cruel & unnecessary although it is not illegal We don't advocate kennel life for a family pet Dogs are sociable animals Left for long periods of time outside & alone can cause distress and behaviour changes

Dogs are highly sociable animals. Left alone for long periods of time isolated & alone can cause distress and behaviour changes.

A dog left unattended is a theft risk. It is much easier to steal a dog from a garden than it is to steal a dog from a house.

Your dog may escape & roam. Dogs are industrious creatures & will look for breaches in your garden boundary. A roaming dog is at risk of injury as well as being lost. We know of roaming dogs being killed by drowning or traffic accidents.

Hypothermia risk. Some dogs cope better than others in the cold as they have been bred to withstand the weather. However no dog should be exposed to prolonged cold temperatures. In addition to hypothermia your dog may develop frostbite.

A dog left alone may become bored which could result in destructive behaviour

Your dog may be exposed to more stimuli outside than indoors. This may cause them to bark excessively which could be considered a nuisance if you have close neighbours.

Heatstroke kills. A dog outside & unable to escape the weather is in danger of over heating.
